ABOUT THE SEMINAR

With the fastest growing complexities and challenges of modern society, scientific research sustains as a crucial alternative in providing latest information, exhaustive understanding of the reality, discover of new thoughts and solution of the problem. It has been an incessant passion with mankind at all ages- in ancient period by Greek philosophers Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, medieval period philosophers of Islamic world Ibn-Sina, Ibn-Al-Hayathan and Al-Biruni and modern times Machiavelli, Kant, Descartes, and Spinoza. Modern science began with Francis Bacon's discovery of Inductive method. Contributions of Galileo, Isaac Newton, David Hume, J S Mill, Karl Popper, Thomas Kuhn to the development of science was noteworthy and momentous. Broadening the horizon of research is closely integrated with Qualitative and quantitative research which is a methodological advance of research. Qualitative research focuses period philosophers of es on textual, visual, or audio-based data while quantitative research focuses on numerical data. Inductive approaches are usually used within qualitative research and quantitative research tends to reflect a deductive approach, informed by positive philosophy. While doing research, ethical standard for conduct is vital to be followed in order to build up public support and accountability. This seminar will present and explore holistically many exciting developments, numerous tools and techniques and broad horizon of research methodology in a concise, cogent, and comprehensive manner in the fast-evolving society.

Objectives of Seminar:

The proposed seminar intends to:

- Understand the significance of Research and its Methodology in academics
